

THE BRERA RANGE

Rich, busy, boasting a long established tradition of culture and art, Brera is certainly the most lively part of Milan. Its museums and open-air cafés complement the art and fashion world and here the architects and designers try out their new, sometimes very avant-garde, creations. Many boutiques are designed using the Nanto stone. This stone, the source of inspiration for the "BRERA" line, fully captures the colours and surfaces that make Milan a unique, "modern" city. Here, the "made in Italy" label presents the distinctive aesthetic features, envied by the rest of the world, that have made it so successful and popular.

A BELLE PROMOTION

"We don't sell tiles, we sell fashion™"

I love and appreciate quality in design and fashion, so when I find a product that I fall in love with, well, what can I do but promote it to my best ability? The Brera range, by Ergon, is a delight to the senses. To feel as well as experience its physical texture immediately conjures a feeling of timeless elegance. It's applicable in both domestic and commercial applications.

I was charmed by the technology: that an engineered stone could have the integrity of natural stone, without the difficulty of the laying and maintenance. The rectified sizes offer vast design possibilities, with sizes starting from 45x45cm, to the large formats of 30x60cm.

Brera is timeless, both in a contemporary and classical sense. I am delighted to promote it.
